- Always popular, Tudor homes like this one present a solid, impressive appearance. In keeping with today's requirements, the house is also designed for energy conservation.
- Inside, a foyer set in a turret and an elegant reception hall move traffic well to either the formal or informal areas. Both the fireplaced living room and the formal dining room open to a screened porch with a built-in barbecue.
- The family space consists of a well-designed kitchen and a family room with a built-in table and French doors opening to a second porch.
- Upstairs, the luxurious master suite includes a round master bath set in a turret, a dressing room with vanity and a bedroom with a romantic sloped ceiling and a walk-in closet. Through French doors, both the master bedroom and bedroom two access the sun deck. A hall bath, third bedroom and bonus space over the garage complete the plan.
- Foundation: basement.
